Enrico A. Spadafora, 55, a John Hope Franklin Book Prize winner, has been named a 2013 ASIAN AMERICAN STUDIES CONFERENCE. The conference will be held April 18-19, 2013 at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. The conference is sponsored by the Association of Asian American Studies, which represents over 400 scholars and scholars' organizations from around the world.

The John Hope Franklin Book Prize is the highest honor in the field of Asian American studies. It is given to a scholarly book that makes a significant contribution to the field of Asian American studies. The prize is named after John Hope Franklin, a renowned scholar and civil rights activist.

The conference is open to all scholars and scholars' organizations in the field of Asian American studies. It will feature sessions on a variety of topics, including race, gender, and culture.

The conference will also feature keynote addresses by distinguished scholars, including Enrico A. Spadafora, David S. Lee, and Lisa Cacho. Enrico A. Spadafora is a professor of Asian American studies at the University of California, Los Angeles. He is the author of several books on race and culture, including "The Asian American Experience in the United States: A History of Nativism and Racism." David S. Lee is a professor of Asian American studies at the University of California, Berkeley. He is the author of several books on race and culture, including "The Asian American Experience in the United States: A History of Nativism and Racism." Lisa Cacho is a professor of Asian American studies at the University of California, Los Angeles. She is the author of several books on race and culture, including "The Asian American Experience in the United States: A History of Nativism and Racism."